

Career of the week

Search this career on Unifrog!

TV presenter

Click here to watch videos

TV presenters host or star in television programmes or news broadcasts. They might interview people, report on current affairs, present information, or host talk shows or contests.

Entry routes:

There are no set requirements. Competition for jobs is strong though so you will need determination, persistence, and the ability to network and promote yourself.

Some presenters move into TV from other areas of the media like journalism or media research.

You may need a degree or detailed knowledge if you want to work as a presenter for specialist programmes like science, history or property development.

TV presenter salary:
£24,249 - £32,914

Working hours: Hours may be long and irregular, and include early mornings, late nights and weekends (depending on the program you're working on).

UK growth: +.2% increase in 1,593 jobs from 2020-2035

West Midlands growth:
-4.6% decrease of 2,314 jobs from 2020-2035

Character virtues

responsibility, resilience, courage

Key words

journaling, recording, programs, projects, creating, Delivering, people, news